

Facilitating intercultural discussion on sexual health and relationships among forced migrants

Conference at the Wesleyan Chapel, City Road, London
EC1Y 1AU

Tuesday July 16th , 11.00 – 4.30

A one-day conference to share the experiences and outcomes of a research project examining intercultural understanding on sexual health and gender relations among recently resettled refugees and asylum seekers in Norwich.

Delegates will have the opportunity to draw on their own experiences, identify challenges and examine the guidance handbook, which was developed by a team from the NGO New Routes Integration and the University of East Anglia. This resource is based on a series of workshops designed and delivered by New Routes Integration with the Terrence Higgins Trust and a local Domestic Abuse Change Co-ordinator.

There will be workshop sessions to explore the impact of translation, language and terminology, how sensitive cultural and personal reflections and assumptions can be shared and debated, how knowledge (legal, cultural, religious) is differently valued and prioritised by diverse communities and how collaborative learning can be supported across multi-ethnic populations and grassroots organisations.

Tickets, £10, including lunch, are available to book on Eventbrite: sexual-health-relationships-conference.eventbrite.co.uk

We look forward to sharing the research findings of this intercultural, exploratory programme.

New Routes Integration

UEA
University of East Anglia